Overview

The McHenry County Prairie Trail stretches 26 miles from Algonquin to the Wisconsin State Line. The trail follows the former Chicago and Northwestern rail line that ran from Kane County into Wisconsin. By building the Prairie Trail along portions of the corridor that were abandoned by the railroad and complementing the existing active rail with adjacent trails, the District has recycled an old mode of transportation into one for the future.

The Prairie Trail's main access points are located north of Algonquin, along Main Street in Crystal Lake, at Petersen Park in McHenry, and in Glacial Park north of Ringwood. There are also several scenic and recreational stopping points along the Trail, including the Fox River and Larsen Prairie. The Prairie Trail is open daily, sunrise to sunset.

The Hebron Trail follows the old K.D. Railroad line, connecting to the Prairie Trail at North Branch Conservation Area near Richmond and continuing 5.5 miles to Church Street in Hebron.

Trail Facts

- ◆ Between the Kane County line and U.S. Highway 14 in Crystal Lake, the Prairie Trail is built on an abandoned rail corridor. From U.S. Highway 14 north to Ringwood, the trail is built adjacent to an active rail line, making it one of the country's longest trails along an active rail corridor.
- ◆ The Prairie Trail connects eight McHenry County communities, including Algonquin, Lake in the Hills, Crystal Lake, Prairie Grove, McHenry, McCullom Lake, Ringwood and Richmond.
- ◆ From the Prairie Trail, users have access to over 100 miles of trail network including the Hebron Trail, Ridgefield Trace, the Fox River Trail, the Great Western Trail, and the Illinois Prairie Path.
- ◆ The Hebron Trail is built on the former Kenosha Division Railroad that carried passengers, mail and freight from Kenosha, WI to Rockford, IL. The K.D. line ran from 1860 until its final voyage in 1939.
